

SEARCH »

This Is Wiltshire » News »

NEWS

Rudman sixth as Britain's Williams claims women's Olympic skeleton gold

2:16am Saturday 20th February 2010

Print | Email | Share

By Owen Houlihan »

SHELLEY Rudman claimed sixth place as Great Britain teammate Amy Williams won a brilliant gold medal in the Olympic skeleton competition in Whistler.

2006 silver medallist Rudman, tied seventh overnight, produced her best two runs of the event on day two to move up a place.

Starting 0.96 off the pace after the first two runs, the 28-year-old from Pewsey also broke 54 seconds for the first time in her third run as she recorded a time of 53.95, enough to keep her in seventh position.

And she went even faster in her final outing, clocking 53.82 to nudge a place up the rankings, but will be disappointed by her first run on Thursday night, which left her languishing in 11th position and ultimately cost her a medal chance.

Bath's Williams, who was a reserve and doing radio commentary when Rudman won silver four years ago, became Britain's first individual Winter Olympics gold medallist since Robin Cousins in 1980 by continuing her opening-day domination.

She shattered the Whistler track record for the second time to extend her lead to more than half a second after the third run.

And she shaved a further 15 hundredths of a second off her time from the first run yesterday, blazing down in 53.68 to hold a 0.52 advantage over Canadian favourite Mellisa Hollingsworth, who moved up to second.

The 27-year-old turned her final run into a victory procession, clocking 54 seconds flat to obliterate her rivals to triumph by a huge 0.56-second advantage and start the celebrations among the British fans.

MORE REACTION THROUGHOUT THE WEEK AT GAZETTEANDHERALD.CO.UK AND IN NEXT THURSDAY'S GAZETTE & HERALD

Print | Email | Share

Shelley Rudman finishes her third run at Whistler Sliding Centre today

MOST READ

1. Stop your corporate bullying, Nationwide told
2. OLYMPIC SKELETON BOB: Shelley rues opening Games run
3. Police inspector condemns vandals after damage spree
4. MID WILTS YOUTH & MINOR LEAGUE: Alfie's brace does the trick
5. Flower arrangers to raise money for forces charity to honour local hero
6. Campaigners opposed to town council's move make parish poll plea
7. Chippenham protest group to present petition
8. Teen to appear before magistrates on shoplifting charge
9. Melksham childminder's joy at 'outstanding' Ofsted rating
10. Flu victim Rudman slips to second in World Cup standings